ETHICAL AND SAFETY CONSIDERATIONS

Note that by affixing their signature, the candidate and the host institution agree to comply with all ethics and safety regulations governing the research grant, if applicable. All projects must be reviewed by the relevant evaluation committees before being implemented.

1) Animal research

Animal experiments should be conducted according to the principles outlined by the Canadian Council on Animal Care for the care and use of animals.

2) Human research

In the case of human research, research should be conducted in a manner that is consistent with the guidelines set out in the inter-council policy statement entitled Ethics of Research Involving Humans. Sometimes projects that contain discussions, sometimes audio or video, with patients, caregivers, family members and associated health professionals, deal with private or confidential matters. Where applicable, the candidate must provide a written guarantee that the persons concerned by this information have consented to its disclosure

3) Biological and chemical risks

When the research involves biological and chemical risks, procedures should adhere to the standards set out by the Canadian Institutes of Health Research in the publication entitled Guidelines for the Handling of Recombinantly Produced DNA Molecules and Animal Cells and Viruses.
